Gardening Tip

by Phil Siviour
Coffin Bay Gardening Service

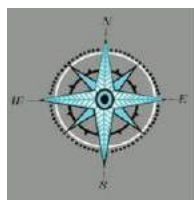

Now is a good time to get growing vegetables. Make sure your plants get winter sun for at least two-thirds of the day. Raised beds are well worth the effort. They are particularly suited to growing veges, and herbs, providing good drainage and aeration for your plants.

There are lots of leafy vegetables as well as brassicas available now from your preferred garden centre. You may like to try getting a combo punnet of seedlings that have a selection of three different varieties.

Unfortunately, some people are finding it difficult to find the seeds or seedlings they want due to the Covid-19 situation. Don't be afraid to use old packets of seeds.

You may be surprised to find they are still ok.

RED-NECKED STINTS

The appearance of these nondescript little grey and white shorebirds, no bigger than a sparrow, belies an amazing life. Weighing in at just fifteen grams (less than four teaspoons of sugar), they are the smallest of the globetrotting migratory shorebirds.

In March and early April there have been flocks of over one hundred on Long Beach, interspersed with Red-capped Plovers, a shorebird of similar size. (More about them in a future article). I have found that the best way to tell the two apart is not by colour but by the way they run; both species rarely walk. The Red-caps could be mistaken for clockwork toys. With heads erect they repeatedly run a few metres and stop. In contrast, the Stints for all the world look troubled, heads down, scurrying erratically, pecking up food which consists of small plant and animal life.

In the dying weeks of our warm season, the scurrying intensifies as their appetites become insatiable. Watching them with a scope, I have never been able to detect what they are finding in the wet sand at Long Beach. Even though microscopic, it must be extremely nourishing. They grow quite rounded as their tanks fill with high octane av-gas in preparation for take-off. A 10,000+ kilometre winged odyssey to their breeding grounds along the northern shores of Siberia and Alaska!

Much has been revealed about shorebird migration routes since 1990 when an international flagging program was commenced. Each country (and some like China and Australia are further divided into regions) has a specific colour code. All across the East Asian-Australasian flyway, flocks of shorebirds are netted, leg tagged with the colours specific to the area and released. When one is sighted, often thousands of k's away from where it was tagged, the colour code is noted and reported to flagging@aws.org.au. Now, after thirty years of reportings, a comprehensive picture of shorebirds' movements has at last been achieved. Not only is this information invaluable for their preservation, it promotes cooperation and goodwill between nations.

After mid-April, only a dozen or so Stints remained at Long Beach. Their feeding had become more sedate, indicating they would over-winter here. Young birds, after their initial flight south, remain a couple of years before returning to breed. The rest of the birds, some with the beginnings of red breeding plumage around their necks, were gone.

Footnote: Red-necked Stints are no longer flagged. As they are tiny and their movements are now so well documented it was considered unnecessary to continue disturbing them.

South Australian Bushfire Garden Revival Lower Eyre Peninsula

Putting the call out to gardeners and for donations of plants, garden tools and anything garden related

Just letting you know that this project is full steam ahead. Whilst our attention has been redirected to social distancing, etc volunteers have still been busy with growing plants and collecting donations of all things garden related for this project.

Can you help with growing plants to rebuild gardens impacted by the bushfire over summer in SA? If you are dividing up plants or taking cutting please do some extras. If you need pots I have heaps, also able to help with some potting mix that has been donated. If you have plant material but don't have the time or expertise to grow them contact me.

Things to consider before your start:

- Plants should only be grown in Australian standard potting mix. No garden soil should be used as best practice is not to spread soil around to different regions
- The plants are for house gardens, veggie patches and orchards not landscape revegetation
- All plants should be clearly labelled
- Donations of seed and bulbs also welcome

Some suggestions for plants to propagate: cottage garden plants, perennial food plants (fruit trees and shrubs), herbs, natives (dianella, kangaroo paw, correas). Think of a garden centre and the variety of plants available.

We will be propagating plants now through to June with the collection points opening for receiving plants from June onwards until the end of July. The plants and garden equipment will be made available through garden centre style open days free for recipients ready for spring planting.

If you would like to donate or be a volunteer grower contact Kerry McEwan 0498 387 961 email sabgrlep@gmail.com
